ORAL HISTORY PROJECT

A project of the LBF Education Committee

INTERVIEWER TIPS

1. The interviewer will not be seen; only the voice will be heard. The interviewee, however, will be seen throughout. Men should wear a white or blue shirt and to avoid herringbone or any fine plaid or patterned jacket or tie. Pinstripes or large patterns are acceptable. Women should follow the same instructions regarding small patterns or plaids in their choice of clothing.
2. Plan for your questions and the answers of the interviewee to last approximately one hour.
3. To insure a smooth interview, we recommend that the interviewer meet with the interviewee at some point prior to the event for a pre interview. Go over the process and the topics you intend to cover. Ask if there are any issues the interviewee would particularly like to discuss. Also, ask if there are any subjects the interviewee does not want to mention (and then follow that instruction).
4. During the pre interview, ask the interviewee to bring to the interview memorabilia such as photos of themselves, family, friends, time periods, court houses, significant events, mentors, copies of publications, degrees, etc. These items will be captured on film the day of the interview and returned that same day.
5. Ask open ended questions. Do NOT retell the interviewee's story. Act as though you are meeting the interviewee for the first time. Ex. Do not say "You worked as a judge for the fifth circuit court of appeals. Tell me about it." Instead ask, "What was your job title? And what did you do?" The second question will force the interviewee to say "I was a judge for the fifth circuit court of appeals. During that time, I..."
6. Don't let periods of silence fluster you. Give your narrator a chance to think of what she wants to add before you hustle her along with the next question. Relax, write a few words on your note pad.
7. You are creating a record for posterity. Encourage the interviewee to use the full names of people to whom he refers, e.g. "Judge John Doe" as opposed to just "Judge Doe."
8. When the interviewee has finished answering the last question, thank him for his participation to show that the interview has ended. Wait for the signal from the videographer that the camera has stopped running.
